14 Financial and other inducements

Most countries, including Australia, have specific legislation prohibiting any person or company from offering a bribe to a government official or for an official to receive a bribe.

It is a criminal offence to bribe a foreign public official under the Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) (Criminal Code). Australian companies or individuals that bribe a foreign public official can be prosecuted under Australian law and the laws of foreign countries. There are potentially serious consequences for breaching the Criminal Code, including fines and imprisonment. The high penalties for foreign bribery reflect the seriousness of bribery and its consequences. In addition to criminal penalties, any benefits obtained by foreign bribery can be forfeited to the Australian Government under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (Cth).

The offence of bribing a foreign public official has a number of elements, all of which must be present for the offence to apply. A person is guilty of an offence if:

- (a) the person provides a benefit to another person or offers or promises to provide a benefit to another person or causes a benefit to be provided, offered or promised to another; and
- (b) the benefit is not legitimately due to the other person; and
- (c) the conduct described in paragraph (a) was carried out with the intention of influencing a foreign public official (who may or may not be the other person) in the exercise of the official's duties as a foreign public official in order to obtain or retain business or obtain or retain a business advantage which is not legitimately due.

A benefit can be non-monetary or intangible inducement offered directly to the foreign public official. It also includes benefits provided or offered by an agent. It is not relevant that the benefit is considered customary or perceived to be customary or tolerated.

The Company does not permit or condone the making of payments (including payments in kind such as gifts, favours, etc.) to influence individuals to award business opportunities to the Company or to make business decisions in the Company's favour. You must not give or offer to anyone a gift, bribe, inducement, favour or payment of any kind in expectation of preferred treatment of the Company, its employees or anyone associated with the Company.

In some countries in which the Company operates, employees may be asked to make small payments to low-level public officials or government employees, which are sometimes called facilitation payments. These payments are sought to expedite or bring about routine services or actions by those individuals. The Company does not permit or condone the making of facilitation payments.

In addition, the Company must maintain an accurate and auditable record of all financial transactions in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. This includes maintaining appropriate records of all gifts, entertainment and payments to government officials, employees and others. Entries should not distort or disguise the true nature of any transaction.

This Code does not prohibit any payments, including facilitation payments, where these payments are made in accordance with the Criminal Code and this Code of Conduct.

This section of the Code of Conduct also applies to agents and third parties who are engaged by the Company to represent its interests.

15 Consequences of breach

Any breach of compliance with this Code of Conduct is to be reported directly to the Managing Director, Chair or Report and Investigation Officer (if one is appointed), as appropriate. Anyone breaching this Code of Conduct may be subject to disciplinary action, including termination.

The Board has also adopted a Whistleblower Policy to encourage reporting of violations (or suspected violations) and to provide effective protection from victimisation or dismissal to those reporting by implementing systems for confidentiality and report handling.

16 Review of Code of Conduct

The Company will monitor compliance with this Code of Conduct periodically by liaising with the directors, officers and employees. Suggestions for improvements or amendments to this Code of Conduct can be made at any time by providing a written note to the Managing Director.

The Board will review this Code of Conduct at least annually, and update it as required.
